Forwarded as a matter of interest to Small Business thanks to Ray Mahr. These are similar to those used at the COVID-19 Task Force.

Current projections indicate that June 1 may be a realistic target for easing up of social isolation in the US; if recovered victims have developed an immunity (currently unknown.)

Uncertainty calculations for both US and each state.

CNN calls these calculations "HILLS"

What has been the response of government to the challenges faced by the defense industrial base brought on by the global response to the COVID-19 pandemic?

The entire NDIA policy team will be on the line to discuss the government response, NDIA's engagements with the Pentagon and Congress, and what's still to come.

Our Senior VP for Strategy and Policy, Wes Hallman, will talk to the multiple efforts underway to mitigate any damage to the defense industrial base from our OEMs to our small businesses across the supply chain.

Kea Matory, our Director of Legislative Policy, will talk through our work with congress both independently and through a consortium of like-minded associations. And, we'll have Principal Director for Strategy, Corbin Evans, discuss our small business survey and how that's resonated in the Pentagon and on the Hill. We'll also have Chris Smith of our regulatory team and Jonathan Kupperman on the legislative team for an extended question and answer session. Click here to register.

Planning, Programming Budgeting, and Execution (PPBE) Webinar - Friday, April 10, 2020 at 1pm EDT

What matters in DoD? If you tell me what's resourced, I'll tell you what matters.

DoD uses four distinct processes to manage department resourcing: Planning, Programming, Budgeting, and Execution. These processes, led by different groups with different incentives/priorities and levels of knowledge, skills, and experience, run simultaneously, while actions taken in one can ripple across to the others.

Gaining an understanding of each process will provide context to WID and NDIA members as they pursue DoD business opportunities.

On April 10th, Col (Ret) Rachel McCaffrey, NDIA's VP of Membership and Chapters and Executive Director of Women in Defense, will again share her PPBE knowledge and insights in a webinar exclusively for NDIA and WID members. Join her for an interesting, practical discussion of DoD resourcing. Click here to register.

Section 889B Overview Webinar – Wednesday, April 22, 2020 at 1pm EDT

Section 889 of the 2019 National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) restricts U.S. executive agencies from purchasing certain products and services from some Chinese telecommunications companies (including Huawei and ZTE) and also from working with contractors that use such products. Part A went into effect via an Interim Rule in August 2019, prohibiting contractors from selling covered products and services to the government. Part B will go into effect in August 2020 and contains a much broader prohibition relating to the use of covered products and services - even if unrelated to federal business.

On Wednesday, April 22, from 1-2 EDT, Corbin Evans, NDIA's Principal Director of Strategy, and Chris Smith, NDIA's Regulatory Associate, will provide a briefing on Section 889B that includes NDIA's understanding of implementation status. Section 889B is likely to impact all NDIA member companies. After a short presentation, Corbin and Chris will answer questions. Click here to register.
